Our Scenery Gets 'Em

Monterey Peninsula is becoming a movie center of importance. Just now the Universal and the Metro concerns are operating here. The former company is erecting a big feature set near Point Lobos, and it is evident from the stability of the structure and the attendant expense that the work there will be more or less permanent.

With Earl E. Olin as art director, the Metro company is building an Hawaiian village at Cypress Point.

The wonderful scenery hereabouts has won the admiration of the various producers.

J. J. Shields, field representive of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., whose home is in Sacramento, is sojourning here with his family. They have the Seideneck bungalow.

Mrs. E. K. Fowler and son were here for a few days this week. They visited with the Dorwart family.

Original music, composed by Thomas Vincent Cator, will be rendered tomorrow and Saturday evenings at the Forest Theatre during the Dunsany plays.

D. W. Call and family, who used to live here, were guests at Pine Inn for a few days last week. Some day they'll have a home of their own in Carmel.

Mr. and Mrs. Mackenzie Gordon and son and mother, Mrs. Coope, are guests at La Playa. Mr. Gordon is the wonderfully well known Scotch tenor, whose song brings memories and heart notes to his listeners.

Ballard Williams, a noted New York artist, is at the Highlands. He is enthusiastic over the scenery on the Monterey coast.

Mrs. E. Chamberlin of Toledo, Ohio, is at the Inn, visiting her brother, Thomas S. Parkhurst. So enchanted is she with this section that she has declared her intention to build here.

The Highlands community will be well represented at both performances of the Dunsany plays at the Forest Theatre tomorrow and Saturday nights.

What the Crltics Think

Tuesday evening, August 17, at Arts and Crafts Hall, the young Russian Bass, Vasia Anikeeff will give his second "Evening of Song."

Of this young singer Mr. Redfern Mason of The San Francisco Examiner writes:

"The lad proved worthy of what has been said of him. He opened his lips and a tone welled forth, soft, diffusive, full of the gentleness of power. It was the prisoner mourning in his chains; it was the Russian workman toiling in the sweat of his brow, pulling the great barge with a rope caught over his shoulder; it was the mother crooning her infant. All the soul of Russia trembled in that music. We felt something of what the bystanders must have felt when Christ touched the lips of the dumb man and he spoke. Many there are who sing, but it is only in the unspoiled immigrant from a land where song is of hoary tradition that the melody and naive verse put on the dignity and pathos that throb with the genius of a race.

"Vasia Anikeeff is more than a mere singer, the even at that estimates his gifts will enable him to make his mark. What he sings is the sorrow, the longing, and the divine aspiration of Holy Russia."

Mr. Ray Brown of the "San Francisco Chronicle" says, speaking of the evening when he heard this Russian boy:

"It was an evening long to remember for its atmosphere redolent of the earth and for its feeling of intimate contact with the soul of people."

Mr. Selby C. Oppenheimer who brings all the great singers and musicians from the East to the coast says of Vasia Anikeeff:

"This young Russian boy has undoubted talent, talent of a rare sort—he has an unique art."

Mr. Anikeeff has spent two summers in Carmel, Pebble Beach and Monterey and his many friends here will be glad to prove by their presence at his second concert that it is sometimes the exception that proves the rule and in his case the prophet is renowned even in his own town.

Sherman & Clay of San Jose, hearing that Mr. Anikeeff was to sing here on the 17th, telegraphed his manager offering the use of their Steinway grand piano down for the Cooper-Strauss concert of last week.

In order not to overcrowd the hall only one hundred and fifty tickets will be sold, and may be obtained at Mr. Heron's Book Shop and from Ann Dare.

Raise the Pay

Monterey, in common with other California counties, is embarrassed by a scarcity of elementary school teachers. County Superintendent Mignon reports that seventeen schools in this county are without teachers for the coming term.

It is not that the universities and normal schools are not turning out teachers, but the inadequate salaries paid that forces the graduates into factories, stores and offices. Means must be found to increase the salaries.

Carmel is not one of the seventeen. We have three teachers engaged for school opening on September 6.

A Classy Exhibition

The opening reception last Monday evening at Arts and Crafts Hall brought together a brilliant assemblage for Carmel's annual art exhibition.

The gallery had been newly decorated and gave an agreeable setting for the pictures, many of which were of the modern brilliant coloring.

Among those particularly noted were E. Charlton Fortune's "El Rancho del Carmelo," the center of interest being a group of buildings in full sunshine; Armin Hansen's "Running for Cover;" H. A. Alderton's "Father Junipero Serra's First Mass in Monterey;" "The Poppy Garden" by Mary Herrick Ross; the interesting canvas of Josephine M. Culbertson, showing the infrequently painted side of the Mission with its buttresses full of color; a delightful group of pastels by Catherine Comstock; six small water colors by W. C. Watts, and many other interesting canvases by W. P. Silva, M. DeNeale Morgan, T. S. Parkhurst, Cornelius and Jessie A. Botke, Ada Bell Champlin, Ida M. Curtis, Frances Clark, Phillips F. Lewis, Guy and Ethel Rose, and Nellie R. Gera. Mrs. L. L. Peabody had a case of miniatures; Marie R. Duggar some charming bits of sculpture, and Edwina Devendorf a fine boy's head modeled from life. Ida A. Johnson was represented by six of her well known water-colors of California wild flowers.

The exhibition will be open daily from 2 to 5 until Sept. 4.

Plays Tomorrow and Satutday Nights

Lord Dunsany and His Work

Lord Dunsany, born a baron of Ireland, owes far more to the gift of genius than to the accident of birth. He is a prince of poets.

As a dramatist he ranks with Ibsen and Maeterlinck, leaders in the wide revolt against realism in art. Unlike them, however, this Irishman of Danish ancestry and English culture is a citizen of all the world. He follows no tradition, is of no particular epoch, and has no theories for the uplift of humanity. Accepting life, he seeks for beauty—and he finds it.

He is a master-craftsman of style. What living man can equal the splendid simplicity of his text, its Biblical austerity, its speaking warmth? And who so well as Dunsany, can clothe his power in loveliness?

His characters, though clearly drawn, are types rather than individuals, for his interest is not in men, but in mankind. And often he avoids the purely dramatic, draws back from an emotional climax, anxious that the deeper meaning be not lost. Only actors of earnestness and sincerity, therefore, can hope to tread the boards in a Dunsany play.

But, actor or auditor, who can resist Dunsany—the aristocrat of Meath, whose castle shoulders the Hill of Tara—this dreamer who writes of a country 'at the edge of the world, beyond the East'?

The Tents of the Arabs was first produced in Paris, six years ago. In 1916 it was staged in this country, at Detroit, and since then has been presented frequently.

It is a beautiful story, exquisitely told and of deep significance. Love calls to the king in Thalanna, love and freedom; and he hears the call. For sceptres, palaces—what are they? It is only our dreams which are real, which are eternal.

'You will raise up your head of a night-time against the sky', the king whispers to the desert maiden, 'and the old, old unbought stars shall twinkle through your hair, and we shall not envy any of the diademed queens of the world.'

The Golden Doom had its initial performance in London, eight years ago, reaching this country four years later. In 1917, when New York went 'Dunsany-mad', it was given over and over again.

Fate, in this play, holds the very center of the stage—Fate nonchalantly ironic, lazily fond of a joke. So in ancient Zericon it comes to pass that a potentate, at the bidding of his sooth-sayers, gives up the throne of his forefathers, hurling his crown into the dust—for the good of his people, as he thinks, but truly for no greater gain than that a child shall have a golden hoop to roll away.

A powerful play—a terrible one. Dunsany might well have closed it with this other line of his:

'It is dreadful to think of the laughter of the gods!'

Annual Library Report

At the annual meeting of Carmel Library Association, held August 2nd, the following named persons were elected to membership on the Board of Trustees:

G. E. Beardsley, A. P. Fraser, Mrs. Thomas Pudan, Peter Taylor and D. W. Willard.

The librarians were given a vote of thanks and appreciation for their work, to which is so largely due the growth and prosperity of the library. Mrs. May spoke very warmly of the atmosphere of friendliness and cordiality that pervades the building, emanating from the attendants and felt by every visotir.

The Secretary reported that twelve regular and one special meeting of the Board have been held during the year.

The vacancy on the Board, caused by the departure to another field of usefulness of Rev. S. C. Thomas, was filled by the election of Mr. Peter Taylor.

Following the deeply regretted resignation of Miss Margaret N. Clark from the post of Librarian, the Board was so fortunate as to secure the services of Miss Janet Prentiss already familiar with the work and favorably known to frequenters of the library and she entered upon the duties of the position on November 1st, 1919.

Miss VanBrower assisted Miss Clark during September and Miss Gregg is assisting Miss Prentiss during the press of summer work which grows continually and is especially heavy in the season when Carmel is filled with visitors. The salaries, therefore, both of Librarian and Assistant Librarian have been somewhat increased.

The library was kept open on Wednesday evenings through September but appeared to be of no sufficient reason for the continuance of such service and it was dropped.

A year ago the library owned 4,461 volumes; today the number has increased to 4,882. Many have been purchased and the rest given by the library's many generous friends. Some valuable books and a set of educational pictures have been bought.

A signal bell has appeared upon the desk to warn readers of the approach of closing time. The Board is glad they find the library a pleasant place from which they are loath to withdraw, though it is often uncomfortably crowded.

The circulation during the eleven months ending with June was already more than three thousand greater than the total for any preceding twelve months in the library's history, showing that the library is fulfilling its purpose of serving a constantly increasing number in a way to give the community the greatest benefit and pleasure commensurate with its present capacity.

E. HARRINGTON,
Secretary.

Music That Was Music

Last Thursday evening's concert at Arts and Crafts Hall was a very good example of what can be done in Carmel artistically at very short notice.

It was not decided to give the Cooper-Strauss concert until Monday, and when the artists appeared they were greeted by a full house.

It was very evident that those who attended were not disappointed. Mr. Cooper in every way proved his right to the splendid New York press notices, playing with a fine directness of thought that was most enjoyable. He is essentially a brilliant painter and one would like to hear him in a large concert hall where there would be no sense of repression.

Mr Strauss at once established a sympathy with his audience, and we were again conscious of his unusual art. In fact, there are few of the younger singers who so faithfully study the meaning of their songs.

It is to be hoped that we may have more of this kind of music in the near future.
